GLADES MURDER VICTIM STILL UNIDENTIFIED

Rioters Dispersed

Over 70 law enforcement officers were quickly mobilized to head off a potential riot at the Kennedy Labor Camp of the Sugar Cane Growers Cooperative of Florida, Tuesday.

Sheriff William R. Heidman personally supervised the efforts of the combined force consisting of Sheriff's Dept. Riot Squad, Belle Glade Police and South Bay police and members of the Florida Highway patrol and the border patrol.

The disturbance involved over 300 of the off-harvest workers brought to this country for the annual sugar cane harvest. A total of 52 arrests were made and these men are being held on bond of $11,500 each. After the arrests, 100 other cane cutters were loaded on buses and transported to Miami for flights back to the islands.

Postal Rates Effective Jan. 7

Postmaster Rosa Nash is reminding mailers that new higher postage rates become effective January 7, including the 6-cent-an-ounce charge for first-class letters.

"When you consider that 6 cents will carry a first-class letter addressed to any one of 200 million persons in 50 states as well as letters addressed to any of 63 million persons in Mexico and Canada," she added, "this still remains as one of the biggest bargains on earth."

The 20 per cent rate in first-class letter rates, effective January 7, is a smaller percentage rate than that imposed on other types of mail.

She pointed out that there has been a 24 per cent rate in the rates for mailing newspapers and magazines and a 34 per cent hike in the charges for advertising circulars, "no coupon" mail and other bulk mail items.

The new rate provisions all to establish important rate changes for heavier first-class mail pieces, Mrs. Nash explained.

If the first-class piece weighs more than 13 ounces, it will go automatically by the fastest transportation available.

The postmaster assured local residents plenty of one-cent stamps are on hand for use with any existing stocks of 5-cent stamps they may have on hand.

There are also adequate supplies of 6-cent stamps to meet the new first-class letter rate available at the post office, she said.

The higher rates become effective January 7 also for other categories of mail used primarily by large-volume mailers. These include bulk advertising mail rates, special rates for books and records.

Interment was in the family plot in Fort Myers Cemetery in Martin County.

Mission Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Services were conducted at 2 p. m. Tuesday, Jan. 2 at Mission Funeral Home Chapel, Palm Beach Road, Belle Glade.

FAMOUS NICOLÒ MARIONETTES TO PERFORM HERE JAN. 7

Sponsored by the Junior Women's Club of Belle Glade, a musical adventure into the Land of Oz, await the youngsters when the world-famous Nicolò Marionettes appear on Sat. Jan. 27th at The Belle Glade High School.

Technically, this is one of Nicolò's most ambitious efforts in many years of producing for children's theatre. The Marionettes, specially articulated to provide a truly human flexibility, and stylized to fit the fantastic elements in the story of the Wizard of Oz, give a sparkling performance.

The heroine, Dorothy, and her dog Toto in their travels through the Land of Oz, meet a Lion who can roll his eyes, a Strawn who takes off his head along with his hat, and the Wizard has a scientific control panel capable of producing thunder, lightning or jelly beans, at the twist of a dial, and many others.

The audience will enjoy the sight of a huge mask floating on a bed of green flame, and a full-scale, thundering tornado in turbulent action, and many stage effects never before seen on the Marionette stage.

Plan to get your tickets early! Admission: 75c. Performance Time: 10:00 AM at High School — 425 W. Lake Rd., the date is Saturday, Jan. 27th. Contact overall chairman Mrs. Joan Levy in charge for the Junior Women's Club, sponsoring this program. Phone 996-2323 or Mrs. Buck Jones, Publicity Chairman for the event.

Kill this pellitory weed in sugar cane.

Use Atrazine. Here's how:

When you see pellitory weed starting to grow, apply Atrazine 80W herbicide, plus a little surfactant. You'll clean out infestations of this winter annual fast and effectively — without hurting cane.

Atrazine is safe to sugar cane. It will not injure your crop when you apply it as directed on the label. And since it's non-volatile, there's no danger of drift to adjacent, sensitive crops.

Even though Atrazine has proved to control pellitory at any stage of growth, early treatment assures best results. With pellitory under control early, you grow more sugar cane per acre.

That's because Atrazine prevents pellitory from interfering with sugar cane tillering. Also, Atrazine helps make soil moisture and nutrients available for your cane, and not for pellitory weed.

So plan now to grow the maximum tonnage of sugar cane from each acre you plant this season. Just use Atrazine to control pellitory weed this winter.

New Year — 1968

By Mary Todd
Home Extension Agent
Let this New Year be the beginning of a new life in each of us wherein "Old things are passed away." Not the old thoughts which are still true; but those that remain to nurture and encourage our prejudices. Not the emotions that are filled with kindness; but all anger and bitter feeling. Not the old reverence for the authority of God; but all fears born of our unworthy service apart from Him.

Not the old gracious ministries that bless mankind; but the harsh words, the suspicious looks. Not the old habits that keep us in a straight way; but the new fashions that make us unmindful of those things which hold life together in the unity of good mankind. Not the old friends who grow more beloved each year because their worth is better appreciated; but the new associations made from mercenary motives.

THOUGHT OF THE WEEK

The only way to have a friend is to be one.—Emerson

SENSING THE NEWS

By Thurman Sensing

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Southern States Industrial Council

Time For Austerity

As the year draws to a close, Americans watch with dismay as raids are made on the nation's gold supply by gold speculators in Europe, including the French Republic which was once a staunch friend of the United States. Attempts are being made to undermine the value of the dollar and, thereby, to jeopardize the entire U. S. economy.

This is a grave danger which requires across-the-board effort by the federal government. On the foreign front, the nation needs to stop the flow of gold to France, U. S. Sen. Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) has proposed a legislative ban on further shipments of gold to the French until they resume payments on their World War I debt to the United States. This debt exceeds $6 billion. It is high time that the Johnson administration publicly remind the French that they owe this sum to the American people. Of course, it is only a part of the much vaster sum that the United States has voted to the protection or assistance of France in this century.

Halting the gold flow by law is only one part of the remedial effort that must be undertaken promptly to protect the dollar. Action at home also is needed. What sort of action is required has been succinctly stated by Prof. James C. Dole of the Department of Finance at the University of Texas. "Prof. Dole has taken these steps: (1) Balance the federal budget by cutting non-defense spending; (2) balance our international payments by eliminating all foreign economic aid; and (3) take steps to stop the wage-price spiral."

Unfortunately, the Johnson administration apparently is unwilling to take steps of this sort. Instead of cutting non-defense spending, the administration continues to press for new or expanded Great Society programs. The administration bitterly resisted reductions in the foreign aid program this year.

Mr. Johnson also is unwilling to incur the enmity of the union bosses by suggesting that wages as well as prices should be restrained. Settlements in the automobile industry, imposed by the union monopoly, virtually guarantee an additional round of inflation in that key industrial sector. When a manufacturer wants to go up on his price, he faces heavy administration pressure. But the union bosses are not restrained by the White House when they upset the wage structure in the country. That's the political pattern of the Great Society.

Holding the line on public spending of a non-defense character and restraining inflation constitute vital tasks for this nation in the year ahead. Americans have before them the horrible example of Great Britain. The British are in deep trouble because they have spent more than they earned and because wages were allowed to shoot up to the point where British goods priced themselves out of markets.

Not all the blame should be heaped on the White House, to be sure. If the U. S. is to return to fiscal responsibility, there must be concern for fiscal responsibility at the grassroots and in the state legislative assemblies.

Observers of the state legislative scene note that inflation also is hitting hard at state governments. Costs of public education and other programs are soaring. In addition, state governments are under heavy pressure this winter to provide pay raises for public employees that at year's end were not covered. In short, the states are being urged to engage in fiscal irresponsibility, to spend more than they have or to dip into reserve funds created for a rainy day. As this is an election year, the state legislators are especially vulnerable to the pressure for pay hikes.

It is essential, therefore, that there be a national mobilization (and a mobilization in each state) of responsible public opinion in behalf of curbs on spending. Thoughtful citizens will have to organize to let national and state legislators know that a period of austerity is needed if the country is to weather the period of rough economic weather ahead.

'Though the United States is rich in material and human resources, it cannot ignore the laws of economics or engage in giveaways when revenues are down or confidence in the nation's money has dipped somewhat. Only by the practice of frugality will the United States come through the year ahead with its strength unimpaired.

Fla. Agriculture In '68

TALLAHASSEE — Record-breaking yields coupled with strong demand for major crops 1967, hold promise of prosperity for Florida agriculture in 1968.

Especially optimistic is the outlook for citrus. Prices at year's end suggest that on-tree returns to growers may rise as much as two and one-half to three times the return realized last season.

Shipments of almost all vegetable crops were well ahead of those for the same period last year, while 1967-68 season indications are for moderately reduced acreages of celery and tomatoes, which could prompt higher prices.

Livestock producers anticipate producing about the same amount of red meat as they did in 1967, with fed cattle markets during the coming winter months expected to continue above those of the previous year.

Because of unusually good growing conditions during 1967, Florida field crops set new yield records. In spite of this abundance, the 1966-67 season total value of vegetables was practically the same as the previous season.

There bright prospects on the horizon during 1968 for Florida fruits and vegetables.

Here are some reasons why 1968 should prove to be a banner year for Florida agriculture:

BEEF CATTLE

The prospects for beef cattle hinge on interest rates, prices, wages, prices and consumer incomes, all of which are expected to rise during the next year, and are expected to increase the level of meat consumption per person.

With a continued strong consumer demand, fed cattle prices are expected to average about the same as in the fourth quarter of 1967, with increased likely to be small.

Beef production in 1968 could not be maintained at much higher levels than in 1967 without larger reductions in total cattle numbers.

There has been a decline in the number of cattle during the past three years and without reducing the beef production potential in the future.

FIELD CROPS

The 1967-68 indications are for moderately reduced acreage of celery and tomatoes, while sweet corn acreage planned to date is about eight percent ahead of last year.

Dry weather during the Fall has resulted in excellent growing conditions, resulting in record-high yields of celery and sweet corn.

OTHER CROPS

Other crops generally will hold near present levels, with the exception of production of soy beans, which will continue its upward trend.

Ed Cicolini announced he aimed to spend part of the New Year helping the Great Society find 791 needed employees. He reported he had saw where the General Accounting Office had reported one Job Corps Center in California had 1,869 people enrolled and didn't have but 1,078 Government employees handling the job. Ed allowed as how they got to have 791 more Government workers to get it up to one employee per one student and it was his patriotic duty to help find them.

Isaac Conkelder, that usual dandy who has much to say at the sessions, told the fellows he was too busy trying plans for income tax report farmers has got to mail in before February 15 to worry about anything else. He said he had already got one time filled out. Where it asks for "Occupation," Isaac said he had put "Just Retiring."

Ed claimed this would be a great mistake, that the first thing their Government folks would do when they got the report would be to put Isaac to work. Ed said a fellow that was "just retiring" was supposed to be on welfare and relief.

Yours truly,
Uncle Dan

Poinsettias Can Be Saved For Next Christmas

Don't toss out that pot of holiday poinsettia when the last leaf drops and the final red bract drops stop a spangle-like stem.

Like a red-headed stepchild without make-up — the plant can be revitalized into a marvel of beauty with proper treatment.

The plant will show brilliant color next winter if you follow these tips from Dr. E. W. McElwain, Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist.

First, store the pot, plant and all, in an out-of-the-way place and forget about it until about the middle of March. This careless treatment is intended to hibernate the plant during the frosty days while the shriveling root feeds the sleeping roots.

Don't water the dormant plant.

But, so it won't dry out too much, lay the potted plant on its side in a cool dry place. Under the back porch is an ideal place. If you live on a concrete slab, try storing the sleeping plant in that shady corner of the carport.

When spring comes, tenderly awake the plant by sloughing off the dead top and by placing the roots in a new bed of rich soil. You can grow the new plant in last season's pot, but the poinsettia will be happier if you set it in the soil where it can fix its roots better than in the confines of a pot.

If you did not get a gift of poinsettias for Christmas, it is easy to establish plantings of the holiday ornamental by purchasing potted stock from a local nurseryman. However, some green thumb operators feel that they have better luck if they sneak hardwood cuttings from a neighbor's yard following the flowering season.

Poinsettias will grow on a wide range of soils, including sand, muck, mud, rocky soil and clay. In spite of the wide adaptability, the plants will present you a better show of color if you take proper care of them.

Fertilizer application is important. Apply about 1½ pounds of a good garden fertilizer per 100 square feet of plant space in early spring, again in June and perhaps in mid-summer if there are heavy rains.

Pruning is the secret of a canopy of color next Christmas.

In spite of this abundance, the 1966-67 season total value of vegetables was practically the same as the previous season.

THE DEEP END

By TOM HERAN

The "If Only" Complex

For those of you who don't know, the "if only" complex is a disease that afflicts most of the world's population. Most everyone gets it at a very early age and it gets worse and worse as the years go by. The illness can be cured by the individual himself through self-analysis.

Of course many of us don't even realize that we are afflicted until we're too old to do anything about it. The first symptoms appear early in life, in fact it is hard to remember the first time we said, "if only" I had done that differently or "if only" I had treated him better.

As the years pass we keep saying it more and more, but nothing changes. In fact things get worse and we use the phrase as a crutch. What can you do to cure yourself of the bad habit of living in the past. Start thinking of what you're going to do instead of what you should have done.

Every time you feel your thinking "if only," mentally change that phrase to "the next time." "the next time" I'm not going to do or act this way. With this change you'll feel better, have a better attitude and won't waste your life living in the past. There is nothing that you do today that you'll be able to change tomorrow, in fact there is no guarantee you'll be here tomorrow. So make the most of the time you have left to live in the present and the future, for the past is gone forever.

Garden Indoors
End of summer blues can be partially cured by bringing a portion of the garden back in pots. Plants that have been plunged in planter boxes or garden soil may have outgrown their old homes. If plants do not re-potting, use clay pots a size larger and soak new clay pots in water for at least an hour before using.

THE FISHING REPORT

The specks are biting! Almost all fishermen that went after specks this past week caught some. However, the fishermen that went after bass were a little disappointed.

With the approach of the full moon, fishing should begin to get real good for bass and specks.

Some of the catches reported at Slim's Fish Camp this week are as follows:

Monday, Dec. 26—Charlie Nix—7 1/2 lb. bass.
Tuesday, December 27—Tom Foster—2 bass, One 5 lbs. cne 6 lbs.—Joe Gilliam—6 bass, one 6 1/2 lbs.
Wednesday, Dec. 28—Avery Kerschner and party, 5 bass.
Thursday, Dec. 29—Pallon Morris, 35 specks.
Friday, Dec. 30—Cliff Catlin and wife, 73 specks. On Saturday, they caught 35 using No Ahbi jigs.

—Slim's Fish Camp

The fish are in the spawning beds now and fishing should continue good on the lake.

On Tuesday, D. A. Davis and Charles Carl from Boca Raton caught 15 bass.

Tom La Plam came in with 46 specks on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wood from West Palm Beach brought in a nice string of 25 specks on Saturday.

Elmer Downaway and son of Belle Glade had 12 bass on Sunday weighing up to 6 1/2 lbs.
